Courses

“Applying Contemporary Behavior Science in Pediatric Dentistry Practice”

This lecture will introduce attendees to the psychology behind successful, non-pharmacologic behavior management. We can often help patients and their parents by what we say or don't say, effective coaching, avoiding triggering the child patient's survival brain reactions, and intentionally strengthening the social-emotional connection with our patients, parents, and team.

“Ouch! You're Hurting Me!”

This lecture will consider both the psychological and physical aspects of pain perception. Potential responses by the dental team to a patient expressing pain will be discussed with the goal of empowering both the team and the patient to create a more comfortable experience for sensitive patients during and after the dental appointment.

“Childhood Cancer and Antibiotic Prophylaxis in Pediatric Dentistry: What's New?”

This lecture will discuss the state-of-the-science in childhood cancer, including hematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT), and antibiotic prophylaxis for children with cardiac disease and implanted devices that may affect safe delivery of dental and oral care.
